

SCRIPTURE CHARTS ON THE FOREKNOWLEDGE OF GOD

7-23-38.

An inquiry into the subject as to whether or not God knows with absolute certainty all the future choices of moral beings. Associated therewith, of necessity, is the question as to whether or not the WILL of man always acts contingently.

Beside the associated inquiry, the chart is divided into those passages seemingly AFFIRMATIVE and those passages seemingly NEGATIVE. The essence of the chart, as far as the subject under investigation is concerned, is contained in those columns under the above headings marked "Outstanding". On the AFFIRMATIVE side, the column of passages labelled "Doubtful" are so named because it is thought that it is doubtful that they offer any real proof of the matter: either because they can be explained easily by understanding that it was God's intention to bring the events foretold to pass; or that they are lacking in definiteness to prove so great a subject. Specific prophecies of The Messiah are marked (*), no attempt being made to list all the general passages. On the NEGATIVE side, those passages that are hardly definite enough to be called real proofs are tabulated under "Doubtful". They often appear to offer enough proof to warrant their being listed. In as much as the absurdity is advanced on every hand by the absolute prescientist that "God is an Eternal Now" and therefore there is no succession of thoughts or experiences in His existence, the abundant Biblical evidence against such a notion is formulated on the negative side - for if TIME is a factor in God's existence, then the future is future to Him as well as us. Let all who read remember that the inquirer regards not his work as final, but merely records an honest attempt to weigh so important a subject in its Biblical evidence.
